Bottoming Tail Bars and the Almighty Kamikaze

Copyright © 2010 * iFundTraders, LLC. * 2576 Broadway, #158, NY, NY, 10025

Two Types of Bottoming Tail Bars

There are two types of Bottoming Tail Bars:

Regular and Kamikaze

Regular Tail Bars occur at or near the 20-period moving average. This makes for a good, solid play that should be taken at all times.

Kamikaze Tail Bars are tail bars that form deep below the 20-period moving average with space between the high of the bar and the 20ma. These are so powerful they often mark the final low in a stock. This set-up calls for risking it ALL!

Oliver, You have forever changed my life! I am on the road to total financial freedom. I am now able to trade my retirement accounts with amazing success. I no longer feel the need to pay for a financial planner. This has happened because of your vision for and gift to those willing to receive it. Thanks from my heart.

ifundtraders is an amazing trading program. I am so blessed to have this opportunity to learn to trade from Oliver Velez. He is not only a master trader, but a superb communicator. As an RN, I had no prior trading knowledge or experience. I am now on my way to financial freedom and I will be forever grateful to Oliver. I am in the daytrading Equity and Forex programs, as well as the longer term Trade for Wealth program. I highly recommend all 3. Thanks, Oliver...you are the best!

Having followed Oliver Velez's investment recomendations for over two years, it is uncanny his timing and perfection. He is like a symphony Conductor leading the greatest group of musicians, playing an original piece that pleases all who listen. My hat is off to him and my funds are invested in his wealth plays. The Trade for Wealth program has consistently performed with excellent investment results. I have even more confidence that the Master Trader will continue to do well for yet another prized program.
